Art Is For Everyone Director Of Train, John Dillehay Says

By JOHN DILLEHAY

The Kentucky Art Train, which will be in Murray April 18-22 is a project which attempts to demonstrate the interrelation and practicality of the arts and crafts to the people of Kentucky.

As we dress each morning, giving special attention to the selection of harmonious colors, interesting textures and relationships and that "just right" accent to our outfit, we are using visual principals employed by all artists. When we arrange the tools on the new peg-board in the workshop or rearrange the bric-a-brac on the mantle and give any care to the visual appearance, we are functioning as artists.

Industry realizes the importance of the visual and hires designers to improve the appearance of the product and give the packaging a strong visual impact. Newspapers, magazines and books rely more and more on visual material and less on the written word to convey their message. Movies and television are basically visual. As several writers have suggested, this period of time may very well be called "the visual age". It would be impractical to remain a visual illiterate.

However, many artists do not adapt visual elements to such immediate, practical ends. They use the language of art-lines, colors, forms, textures—to express their own personal reactions to their experiences in life. These expressions, paintings, sculptures, prints, etc., can be understood by anyone willing to give the time to learn the language of color, form and line. Since anyone may share the artists' experience by looking at this work, art can be a way to sensitize and widen our own spiritual experiences. Ultimately, this may perhaps be the most practical use of art.

For those who like to make things, art can also be an interesting hobby, and if the desire is great enough, it can serve the practical need of earning a living. This is another aspect of the train's program.

The exhibition in the Kentucky Guild Train contains a variety of contemporary art and craft objects—enough to meet the practical uses mentioned above. The unique demonstration car is equipped to show the processes found in the exhibition. Everyone should briefly and pointed out that the Concord class had achieved a lot of "firsts" in addition to its perfect attendance.

Each year the adult farmer class with the highest attendance mark is feted with a supper. The banks in Murray alternate as host to the first and second place winners. The class with the third highest mark receives a supper from the Coop store.

Members and their wives were presented gifts by the bank. Also present on behalf of Peoples Bank of Murray and the Dees Bank of Hazel were Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Doran and Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Patterson.

Attending from the New Concord Class for another 100 per cent were Hollie Alderdice, L. C. Bailey, Paul Black, Otis Fairwell, D. B. Grubbs, Bill Ed Hendon, Elbert Houston, Harold Houston, Thomas Houston, W. T. Kingings, Frank Montgomery, Aylin McClure, Bobby Spiceland, Bill Stubbfield, Otely White, Jim Wilson, and Curtis Willoughby.

Friday night the speakers will be Rev. E. A. Sommers, a former pastor of the church, and Rev. R. J. Burpoe of Murray. Rev. Norman Culpepper and Rev. Robert Herring both of Murray will be the featured speakers on Saturday night, the last of the institute.

The public is cordially invited to attend.

Progress Of Rockfish Will Be Discussed

Wildlife officials from Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, and the Tennessee Valley Authority will meet on the Murray State College campus Wednesday to discuss the progress of rockfish in Kentucky Lake.

Dr. Hunter Hancock of the Murray State biology faculty will be the coordinator for the recovery of the four of its kind to be held on the campus.

Although the entire rockfish program will be reviewed the major purpose of the meeting will be to lay plans for the recovery of the big sea bass eggs during its spawning season. The attempt to recover the rockfish eggs will be the third. The first attempt came two years ago when eggs were recovered but were found to be infertile. Last year fertile eggs were recovered.

More than 1000 of the big fish have been stocked in the lake since a study conducted by Dr. Hancock four years ago indicated that they should be able to adapt themselves to the TVA reservoir.

Dr. Hancock's study was financed by grants from the Sport Fishing Institute, The Kentucky and Tennessee Wildlife Departments and various departments of TVA also supplied information, equipment, and manpower for the study.

Persons who will attend the session Wednesday include: from the Missouri Conservation Commission: Larry R. Gale, chief, fish and game division, John Funk and Ralph Burrell, research biologists; fisheries; from the Kentucky Department of Wildlife Resources: Bernard T. Carter, director, and Charles C. Bowers, assistant director; from the Tennessee Game and Fish Commission: John Conder, director of commercial fisheries, and Eugene Ruhl, coordinator, Dingell-Johnson research; from the TVA: Gordon E. Hall and Ben D. Jacob, fish and wildlife branch; from Murray State College, Dr. Hancock and Dr. Hensley Woodbridge, librarian.

Holy Communion Will Be Observed

Holy Communion will be celebrated in the sanctuary of the First Methodist Church on Thursday night at 7:30 p. m. This Maundy Thursday Communion Service commemorates the last supper of Jesus with his disciples on the night before his crucifixion.

Throughout Christendom "this night will be remembered as the beginning of what the church now celebrates in the Lord's Supper."

Reverend Mischke said that this service is open to anyone who desires to commune on this Maundy Thursday.

The third of a series of noonday Pre-Easter services, sponsored by the Murray Ministerial Association will be held in the sanctuary of the First Christian Church tomorrow from 12:00 to 12:30.

Rev. A. G. Childers will bring the devotional message. Rev. Childers is a Methodist minister and has served churches in this community.

Coed Finds Ape Of Jungle More Interesting Than Men

LONDON (UPI)—A 27-year-old British coed, who spent 15 months alone in the African jungles, today was reported anxious to go back because she found apes more interesting than men.

"It was wonderful. I can't get back to the jungle quick enough," the Daily Sketch quoted Jane Morris-Goodall.

"I prefer it to civilization," she said.

The newspaper further quoted Miss Morris-Goodall, a Cambridge University undergraduate as saying: "I like apes in some respects better than men."

Miss Morris-Goodall, a willowy blonde, said she logged more than 1,000 hours in the Gorge River chimpanzee reserve in Tanganyika.

To get the animals to accept her Miss Morris-Goodall let her hair grow to her waist and sat for hours where the beasts could inspect her, the sketch said.

According to the newspaper, Miss Morris-Goodall's expedition was financed by the Wildlife Foundation and the National Geographic Society of America.

She reported that chimps ate meat and made primitive tools, such as sticks, to poke into termite nests.

Miss Morris-Goodall reported on her exploits to 500 Fellows of the Zoological Society and the sketch quoted one as saying in admiration: "Nothing of the kind has ever before been obtained."

Firemen Burn Old House On Cherry

Murray Firemen were out early this morning to burn a large workshop on Cherry which stood in the way of the municipal housing which is expected to get underway next month.

The workshop was located behind a grocery store already razed, and the materials in it were considered worthless. Firemen poured a flammable material on the outbuilding and set it on fire. Just enough water was used from the booster of the Ford fire truck to keep the blaze under control.

The black smoke billowing up from the area attracted some attention, however the firemen, under the direction of Chief Flavil Robertson, had the blaze under control at all times.

It was easier to burn the outbuilding, than to tear it down.

Calloway FFA Shows Up Well In Contests

The Calloway County Future Farmers of America showed up well in the annual Purchase District FFA Day activities held at Murray State College last night.

Only the first place winners in the district meet will advance to state competition which will be held at the Kentucky State FFA Convention in June.

Ken Innes, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Richard Innes of Almo, placed first in the recitation of the FFA creed. This was the only "first" scored by the chapter but the club brought back numerous superior and excellent ratings that were indicative of a well rounded program.

College High also achieved a first place win with the honor going to Danny Kemp, Young Kump, an outstanding member of the College High Chapter and the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Kemp of Murray road.

The parliamentary procedure competition for chapter meeting teams was won by Hickman County. James Kennedy of Trigg County placed first in the public speaking event.

Superior ratings won by Calloway High went to Carl Howard in public speaking, Eddie Clyde Hale, tobacco; Joe Pat Hughes, corn; Max Parks, beef, and to the officers in chapter meeting.

Rating excellent were Keith Hayes, impromptu speaking, Rodney Scott, piano and Charles Perry, hogs. Thomas Collins was rated good in soil and water conservation, James Conley, good in rural electrification, and Keith Hayes, good in dairy.

Both the secretary's and treasurer's book of Calloway High received a blue ribbon.

Escapée Held For Federal Disposition

A 29-year old escaped mental patient was being held by the Marshall County Jail today, awaiting decision of the U. S. attorney at Paducah, as to whether federal charges should be filed against him for transporting a stolen car across state lines.

Bill Connors, who escaped from Western State Hospital at St. Louis, Mo., last March 12, was apprehended near Symsonia Monday.

He was accused of stealing an automobile in Tennessee and driving it to Hazel, where he wrecked the car and then took a police cruiser from an officer and his aide at gunpoint.

Len D. McClellon, special agent in charge of the Louisville Bureau of the FBI, said the only possible federal charges Connors could face would be for the theft of the automobile in Tennessee.

McClellon said he is a pending charges were unlikely since all the time "police officer George Barrow and L. J. Hill, a used car dealer, both of Hazel, were being held by Connors, they were within the State of Kentucky.

There also is a possibility that no charges will be filed against Connors because of his mental condition.

Volunteers from the freshman class at Calloway will show the Faxon students around the school today. The visitors will visit regular class sessions with their freshman guides.

After lunch today the eighth graders will have a conference period with principal Bill Miller, Mrs. Lovins, student counselor, and Edward Curd, coordinator of the school.

The students will be given "sign-up" sheets at the conclusion of the consultation period. The sign-up sheets are to be carried home to the students' parents and filled out. The sheets will give Calloway some indication as to what the incoming freshmen will decide to study.

Other ministers participating in the program are the Rev. Leola Winchester, pastor of Rosebower Baptist Church; the invocation, Rev. Lee Ward, pastor of Grand Rivers Methodist Church, the offertory prayer, and Rev. B. M. Dowell, member of Calvert City Methodist Church, the benediction.

The special choir offerings will include "Were You There?" with Miss Rita Lane as soloist, and "Hilith My Soul." A. Joe Asher is the choir director, and Mrs. Royal Butler is the organist.

The service will be held on the lake front in the park's bathhouse area.

The Kentucky Dam Easter Sunrise Organization is the sponsor of the annual services. The services were started to attract area churches-in union services and to provide special services for visitors at the state park.

Mr. Asher also is president of the group.

Mr. Nesbitt normally comes to Murray the third Wednesday in each month but will not be here during April. He is on vacation this month and no representative will fill in during his absence.

Certificates As Pilot Will Be Obtained

Lt. Col. Joseph G. Fowler, Commanding Officer of the Murray State College Military Science Department announced today that an Army ROTC Flight Training Program will be available in September for selected senior ROTC Cadets at the college.

Col. Fowler said that a Federal Aviation Agency approved flight instruction program will be presented by an accredited flying school on a contract basis. The program of instruction will require thirty-five hours of ground instruction and thirty-six hours of flight instruction which will include Federal Aviation Agency flight check.

On completion of the course, the cadets will receive private pilot certificates and will be eligible to apply for further flight training upon entry into the Army.

To be eligible for flight training, cadets must have a high (Continued on Page 4)

First County School Plans Calloway Entry

The first of the county's six graduating eighth grade classes visited Calloway High today to get a pre-view glance of the school program and to make plans for entry in the county high school next year.

Visiting the school today were members of the eighth grade from Faxon School, Tomorrow students from Hazel will visit the school and Lynn Grove will be guests on Thursday.

New Concord is scheduled to visit Calloway Friday, Almo next Tuesday, and Kirksey next Thursday.

IAN FLEMING'S Greatest Thriller THUNDERBALL

WHAT HAS HAPPENED It is a cross-ridden world and after all the experience as No. 007 in the Secret Service, James Bond should not have been surprised by any assignment or what it entailed. Still, he got a job with the superior, "Mr. Bond, you are to be a 'curb' to 'subvert' himself to two weeks, regular training to remedy effects of profigate, softening living in which indulged women not on a dinner spot. A woman's call by Bond identified the mark as a Far Eastern now Bond saw Count Lippe with a phone and wondered if his own conversation with him had been heard. His question was answered later when he was trapped in a spin-stretcher device for treatment. A hand leaving the dial regulator to full speed. Screaming in pain, Bond blacked out.

CHAPTER 3 JAMES BOND never seriously considered telling Headquarters about Count Lippe and what he had done to Bond. The whole thing against the backdrop of Shrublands was so unlikely and so utterly ridiculous. Weakened by a diet of hot water and veg-table soup, the ace of the Secret Service had been tied to some kind of a rack and then a man had come along and just pulled a lever up a few notches and reduced the hero of a hundred combats to a quivering jelly! No! There was only one solution—a private solution, man to man. Later, perhaps, to satisfy his curiosity, it might be amusing to put through a good trace on Count Lippe. But for the time being Bond would stay quiet, keep out of Count Lippe's way, and plan meticulously for just the right kind of pay-off. By the time the fourteenth day, the last day, came, Bond had it all fixed—the time, the place, and the method. At ten o'clock Mr. Joshua Wain received Bond for his final check-up. Wain's smile was elastic with good-fellowship. "And how's the world treating you, Mr. Bond? No ill effects from that unhappy little accident? No. Quite so. The body is a most remarkable piece of mechanism. Extraordinary power of recovery. Now then, shirt off, please, and we'll see what Shrublands has managed to do for you."

Ten minutes later, Bond, blood pressure down to 132/84, weight reduced by ten pounds, osteopathic lesions gone, clear of eye and tongue, was on his way down to the basement rooms for his final treatment. As usual, it was clammy quiet and neutral-smelling in the white rooms and corridors. It was nearly twelve-thirty. Bond lay face down on the massage table and listened for the authoritative voice and the quick slap of the naked feet of his prey. The door at the end of the corridor sighed open and sighed shut again. "Morning, Beresford."

"All ready for me? Make it good and hot today. Last treatment. Three more ounces to lose."

"Very good, sir. The gym follows by the slapping feet, came down the corridor outside the plastic curtain of the massage room and on to the end of the electric Turkish bath. The door sighed shut and a few minutes later sighed again the attendant, having installed Count Lippe, came back down the corridor.

Twenty minutes went by. "Well, thanks, Sam. You've done me a power of good. I'll be back to see you again one of these days, I expect. I'll just go along and have a final salt rub and a sitz bath. You cut along to your carrot cutlets. Don't worry about me. I'll let myself out when I've finished."

Bond wrapped a towel round his waist and moved off down the corridor. There was a flurry of movement and voices as the attendants got rid of their patients and made their way through the staff door for the luncheon break.

Now the petty-officer voice of Beresford sounded down the corridor, making certain that everything was shipshape: "Windows, Bill? Okay. Your next is Mr. Dunbar at two sharp. Len, tell the laundry we shall need more towels after lunch. Ted... Ted. You there, Ted? Well, then, Sam, look after Count Lippe, would you, Turkish bath."

Bond listened to this routine for a whole week, noting the men that cut minutes off duty and got off early to lunch, noting the ones that stayed to do their full share of the last chores.

Now, from the open door of the empty shower room, he called back, "Okay, Mr. Beresford, and waited for the crisp squeal of the gym shoes on the linoleum.

There it was! The brief pause halfway down the corridor and then the double sigh as the staff door opened and shut. Now there was dead silence save for the hum of the fans. The treatment rooms were empty. Now there was only James Bond and Count Lippe.

Bond waited a moment and then came out of the shower room, suff'ly opened the door to the Turkish bath. He had had one.

Just to get the geography clear in his mind, and the scene was exactly as he remembered. It was a white cubicle treatment room like all the others, but in this one the only object was a big cream metal-and-plastic box. It was closed on all sides but the top. The front of the big cabinet was hinged to allow a patient to climb in and sit inside and there was a hole in the top with a foam-rubber support for the nape of the neck and the chin, through which the patient's head emerged.

The rest of his body was ex-

JAMES Bond was right. The outcome of this rather childish trial of strength between two extremely tough and ruthless men, in the bizarre surroundings of a nature clinic in Sussex, was to upset, if only in a minute fashion, the exactly timed machinery of a plot that was about to shake the governments of the Western world.
